THE MASSACHUSETTS REPUBLICANS.

The action of the Republican State Convention at Worcester on Wednesday receives the warmest approval of the leading journals of the party, while the Democratic organs find the work of criticism and detraction exceedingly difficult and are evidently alarmed at the harmony and earnestness of their opponents. The Post which had discounted the possible choice of Adams by preparing to charge that the Republicans are compelled to seek a candidate beyond their party lines, has promptly but rather dolefully changed its tune to a complaint that the party "lacked courage to go for once outside its list of stock candidates." But the Worcester delegates did not expect or desire to please the Post, and in nominating Hon. A. H. Rice they had in view the triumph of Republicanism in Massachusetts. That such a triumph is to crown their work we have the best assurance in the cordiality with which the ticket and platform are indorsed by the Republican press. The Journal commends the spirit manifested by the delegates and says:

> We do not propose at this time to speak of Mr Rice at length. In this vicinity no one is ignorant the eminent business abilities, his thorough political training or his executive talent. As Mayor and Congressman he left no duty unperformed. No conscientiousness ever served by a more faithful public servant. He fully appreciates the obligations of official life, and no man ever sought his assistance in an honest cause who was turned away without a patient hearing. It is the possession of these qualifications, known to all who have had opportunity to test them that Mr. Rice is indebted for that high regard in which he is held by his personal friends. When he shall have occupied the Chair of state a single year there will be none to question his power of usefulness, while there will be many to regret that he has been allowed so long to escape recognition.

The tone of the Convention could not have been improved. There were eleven hundred earnest men assembled to accomplish a task which they are determined shall bring back the prestige of the party in this state, which was lost last year through errant voting. We urge those who have become lukewarm to heal and study the resolutions. If the principles they contain cannot do not embrace a political creed which any man can adopt, then a fairer and a platform are yet to be invented.

No better evidence of the good feeling which characterized the Convention can be given than the fact that through the long and earnest contest for candidate for Governor there was not a word said by the friends of either candidate which could wound the feelings of the friends of any other candidate. There was the best of feeling all round, and the result will be an earnest, hearty campaign and a rousing victory.

The Advertiser is highly pleased with the work of the Convention, and declares its satisfaction in an editorial, from which we make the following extracts:

> The action of the Republican State Convention yesterday will give especial satisfaction in this community, and will be heartily applauded, we cannot doubt, by the consenting voice of the people. If the nomination of our fellow-citizen, Alexander H. Rice, were a merely personal tribute, brought about by superior wishfulness and organization only, there would be little cause to boast of its success. But it was urged and sustained upon public grounds which his friends hold to be of the first importance; and was accepted at last with such generous cordiality as to leave no doubt that their judgment will be justified in November.
> The platform is of the best, both in its materials and its construction. It is strong, vigorous and unequivocal upon all questions at issue, and states positively and clearly the purpose of the Republican party upon the great interests of the State and Nation. The resolutions, as they were read by Mr. Dawes, especially the first, and those relating to the personal integrity of candidates and the necessity of an honest currency, and the last, in which the precedents of the Democracy in this State were happily met, were received with the utmost enthusiasm. There is in them no dodging or evasion of any of the positions now existing public concern, but an earnest desire and purpose to meet them, as they rise, with the courage and wisdom they require.
> A consistent Republican from the start,—his nomination appeals to all those who still regard the Republican party as the best and the only means by which the imperilled interests of the country can be saved. An upright citizen, his appeals especially to those whose faith in parties has been shaken by their too frequent indifference to the moral quality of candidates, but who honestly and earnestly desire that the principles of the Republican party should continue to be the guiding policy of the Nation.

The Globe, which was the leading champion of Dr. Loring, says the friends of that gentleman heartily ratify the choice of the Convention and will work zealously for a Republican triumph. We quote the following from its editorial remarks:

> Mr Rice is indeed a man in every way worthy of the nomination and endearingly adapted for the office of Governor. He has first-class ability, unblotted integrity, fine culture, a large and generous public spirit, and the sterling merits which command respect and with confidence. He is a candidate worthy of the united and hearty support of the party and would make a Governor of whom the State might well be proud. The platform adopted yesterday is an excellent one. In its essential features it does not differ materially from that of the Democrats of the state, and has the advantage of being consistent with the first principles of the party. As between Mr Rice and his competitor, with the record of the Republican party behind him and its promises in his hand, and Mr. Gaston on a Democratic platform, with the record of his party behind him and its promises in his hand, the thoughtful citizen will have no difficulty in making his choice.

A CASE IN POINT.

The proposals for the City of Boston Water Loan were opened on Saturday. The bonds are payable in thirty years, principal and interest in gold; interest payable semi-annually at the rate of five per cent. Bids were made to the amount of over seven millions of dollars, and the awards made to the amount of a million were, $600,000 at 8 3-100 per cent. premium and $100,000 at 9 per cent. premium. This shows that there is money enough for investment, and that bonds payable in gold at a low rate of interest, are preferred to the operations of business on a large scale, which may be influenced by great fluctuations in the value of the currency. A fact of this kind is worth volumes of argument. For the inflationists have not so far proposed that the law shall compel a man to sell his goods or other property unless he pleases, nor to make a capitalist invest his money now secured by mortgage on real estate, in irredeemable paper currency.

The Lewiston Journal notes that Rev. H. C. Tilden, who has been nominated by the temperance men as candidate for Governor of Wisconsin, will decline the honor, for the very good reason that while "he continues to be a staunch and efficient advocate of the temperance cause, he does not believe in the fanatical policy of delivering the State over to the worst enemies of that cause, which would be the result of dividing the Republican vote by his remaining in the field."

The Commercial, General Roberts' home organ, has the unblushing impudence to publish in this city of Bangor the laughing remarks of some fellow named Hibbard concerning the accomplished gentleman who has been elected Governor of this State, and provoking a direct, personal comparison with the late Democratic candidate. Citizens of Bangor will appreciate the effrontery, when we tell them that the intelligence quoted by General Roberts' organ depreciates General Conner's "intellectual calibre," calls him a "man of few parts," of "slight weight" and "totally unfit for the high position," while it commends the "head of the Democratic ticket" as an "able and honest man." And yet the editor of that paper knows that were we to publish the real opinion of himself or of any leading Democrat of this city as to the qualifications of their late candidate it would denounce the statement as "infamous." Do they wish to remind the people that no Democrat of this city dared to meet our challenge in the midst of the campaign to publicly indorse the fitness of their candidate for Governor?

Probably in the absence of the chief editor, the Commercial copies and commends a long article answering the question "Why people are poor" by citing such obvious and common-place reasons as laziness, extravagance, lack of judgment, misfortune, dissipation, etc. It will require at least two subsequent issues to enable the editor to undo the mischief and put the responsibility back upon ex-Speaker Blaine.

A PARTY REBUKE FOR THE OHIO INFLATIONISTS.

THE NEW YORK "JOURNAL OF COMMERCE" ADVISES THEIR DEFEAT.

The New York Journal of Commerce, the old and influential Democratic journal which has so long followed the fortunes of that party, has taken decided ground against the Ohio inflationists and advised the defeat of Allen. The following is an abridgement of the article in which its new and praiseworthy position is announced:

> Governor Allen and his friends assume that the whole Democratic party of the State is with them. The noisiest leaders of the party certainly are; they all are, or pretend to be, inflationists. The Democratic papers of the State are also united in sustaining the platform with more or less heartiness. What are called the rank and file of the party throw their creeps high for inflation. It was to secure their votes beyond a peradventure that the State Convention adopted the heresy. In Ohio the trade-union influence is great, and that has been for years exerted to propagate expansion and repudiation. The associated working-men, as they term themselves, are nearly all to be found in the inflation ranks. The combination is one which is strong, and not to be despised. The Republican party of Ohio for this because represents the contraction instead of the inflation policy in finance, and may be called (for convenience) the hard-money party in that State. They appear to be unanimous in the support of their platform and candidates. For this campaign they may be considered a unit. If only the ordinary voters who hold idly go to the polls and put in their party tickets were to be left out the battle, there would be little reason to doubt a Democratic triumph. But there is a large mass of voters in Ohio who can never be counted on with confidence. They appear only on memorable occasions, and then they are nearly a hundred thousand strong. These are the men who care little for politics, but everything for principles; and when a question of the present interest comes before the people, we may suppose that they will have something to say about it. Their last exhibition of strength was at the Presidential election of 1872, when the total vote cast in Ohio exceeded by 105,000 that of the total at the following year, when Allen was elected Governor. These reluctant voters, if they are of the sort with which we are familiar here, are the better classes in the community. They are business men, who take no part in common political squabbles, and whose party associations are so slight that they do not stand in the way of free and honest action at the polls. These are the men whose experience and observation have taught them the folly of inflation and the wicke lness of the repudiation to which it leads. With these silent voters' rests, as we believe, the result of the contest in Ohio; and they cannot do a greater service to a financially distracted country than by laying aside all other occupations on the 12th of October and giving the deathblow to the most dangerous fallacy of our time."

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The Springfield Republican nominated for Adams and out of 20 delegates from that city, had but one follower.

The New York Herald says: "The Democrats will be badly beaten in Pennsylvania unless the result in Ohio should give them a tremendous boost."

The main difference between the Republicans and Democrats in Massachusetts is, that the Democrats pretend to be a little better Republicans than the Republicans are.—Lowell Courier.

The people of Iowa have two important Constitutional amendments to vote for at their next election. One of them strikes the word "white" from the Constitution, and the other strikes out the word "male," thus authorizing woman suffrage.

The reputed author of the finance plank in the Ohio Democratic platform, during the war made a speech in which he declared that the day would come when a bushel of greenbacks would not buy a bushel of potatoes." And yet he is not happy with the present supply or currency.—New York Times.

Ex-Congressman Wilson, of Iowa, told the editor of the Philadelphia Press, on Saturday, that he was confident the Republicans would carry Iowa by 30,000 majority at the coming election. He has just passed through Ohio, and is perfectly confident of the election of Gen. Hayes.

Two more prominent Ohio Democrats have deserted the inflation standard. They are Representative-elect Payne, of the Cleveland District, and John Todd, eldest son of the late ex-Gov Tod, of Ohio, and the richest iron manufacturer in the Mahoning region.

The New York Staats Zeitung says that "the American people, notwithstanding their superficiality, are much too intelligent not to perceive the revolutionary character of the paper money theory, and much too conservative to allow such atheory to triumph."

Senator Sharon, of Nevada, the proprietor of the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, has offered to the wife of the late W. C. Ralston the use of seven rooms in that building, with private servants and private coach and coachman, so long as she may choose to use them.

The Ohio inflationists are showing signs of alarm. Instead of shouting that they will carry the State by 50,000 majority, their organs are making frantic appeals daily in double lead for thorough local organization without delay. They begin to realize that something beside abuse and bluster is going to be necessary to save them from defeat.

Canada newspapers are complaining bitterly of commercial dullness and hard times. English newspapers are telling the story, and, industrial distress is greater there than in this country. Germany is also suffering a reaction from the sudden wealth brought in by the conquest of France. Everywhere in the civilized world, indeed, times seem to be hard, profits are small, and the people obliged to economize. But no where except in the United States, do they course the administration for it and demand an inflation of money. Poor, ignorant fellows! they believe it comes from overpopulation, the previous hard times, and that the cure is to be found only in cudgeling and thrashing which lies at the bottom of all accumulations.—Concord Monitor.

ELOPEMENT OF A CLERGYMAN'S WIFE.

The wife of Rev. George Colby, of Vassalboro', left him last Saturday, in company with Mr. George French, as is supposed, and the parties have not yet been heard from. Rev. Mr Colby is a Free Baptist clergyman, of excellent standing in community. Mrs. Colby had been engaged in the millinery business, and on leaving managed to pack a large part of her goods in trunks, and took them off with her. Her only child, a daughter, was sent to Boston a short time previously, on a visit. French has left behind a wife and several children; the wife, however, does not appear to be particularly grieved on account of his departure, but takes the matter with much calmness.—Kennebec Journal.

NEW YORK CITY.

The Third Avenue Bank Suspends

NEW YORK Sept 30 It appears that the Third Avenue Savings Bank is really of good credit, its assets, with liabilities of $1 100,000 to its 8000 depositors, and with assets whose immediate conversion would certainly fall to pay more than 50 cents on the dollar The bank never recovered from the run of a few weeks ago made upon it at the collapse of the Tweed Ring, in 1872, and its present insolvency is simply due to the impossibility of realizing the nominal value of the injudicious investments.

Organized Band of Criminals.

There are nearly 2,000 white men in the Chickasaw nation, in violation of the intercourse law It has been known for some time that a well organized band of criminals existed in the Indian Territory, composed mostly of persons escaped from justice in the States, with a regular trail and places of rendezvous, extending from Kansas to Texas and Missouri.

IOWA.

Reunion of the Army of the Tennessee.

DES MOINES, Sept. 30. At the reunion of the Army of the Tennessee last evening, an address of welcome on the part of Iowa and the city of Des Moines was delivered by Hon. C. C. Cole. Gov. Fletcher delivered the annual oration. He referred in kindly terms to the confederates who opposed them, and expressed the hope that the people of all sections of the country would conduct themselves towards each other if in the shadowing years the country. The [illegible] then called forward and made quite a lengthy speech; after speeches by Secretary Belknap Gen. Jeff. C. Davis and others; army songs were sung, and at 11 o'clock Gen. Sherman made a speech.

President Grant's Speech.

President Grant said he had concluded to disappoint those who called on him first in the expectation of getting a short speech and he had jotted down something he wished to say. He then expressed his gratification in recalling the days when they had suffered together to preserve a government they believed worth fighting for and even dying for. We will not, he said, deny to any of those who fought against us any privilege under the government which we claim for ourselves. On the contrary we welcome all such who come forward in good faith to help to build up the waste places, and to perpetuate next our institutions against all enemies, as brothers in full interest with us in a common heritage, but we are not prepared to apologize for the past. To guard against a recurrence of those days, we must begin by guarding against every enemy preventing the prosperity of free republican institutions. I do not bring into this assemblage politics—certainly not partisan politics—but it is a fair subject for the soldiers in their deliberations to consider what may be necessary to secure the prize for which they battled.

The President urged the cultivation of an intelligence among the people in regard to political papers, and said if we are to have another contest in the near future of our national existence, I predict that the dividing line will not be Mason and Dixon's, but between patriotism and intelligence one one side, and superstition, ambition and ignorance on the other. On this centennial year the work of strengthening the foundation of the structure commenced by our forefathers a hundred years ago at Lexington, should be begun. Let us all labor for the security of free thought, free speech, free press, pure morals, unfettered religious sentiments and equal rights and privileges for all men, irrespective of nationality, color or religion, encourage free schools and resolve that not one dollar appropriated to them shall be applied to the support of any sectarian school. Resolve that neither State nor Nation shall support institutions save those where every child in the land may get a common school education unmixed with atheistic, pagan, or sectarian teachings. I leave the matter of religion to the family altar, keep the church forever separate. With these safeguards I believe the battles which created the Army of the Tennessee will not have been fought in vain.

The President's speech was greeted with applause, which was repeated again and again.

Gen. Sherman's Remarks.

Gen Sherman closed the speaking for the night with a humorous short speech in which he said he would all the speeches made here to-night could be printed in full and scattered broadcast through the South, to show the people there how the ex-soldiers of the North will feel towards them

MASSACHUSETTS.

The New York Papers' Comments on the Republican State Convention.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 The World says of the Massachusetts Republican Convention that it would have been good policy to nominate Adams, but nobody outside of Independent newspapers believed the Republicans would nominate him.

The friend of Adams have scared the professional politicians and made, after a few days of preparation, a demonstration for the convention which was somewhat formidable to say the least. Contrasting the Republican with the Democratic candidate for Governor, it must be admitted that the former stands head and shoulders above the latter in all respects which are to be considered in an intelligent canvass. The platform adopted by the convention is compact, frank and positive. It recommends itself to the good sense of every reader

The Tribune says the Republicans of Massachusetts might have done better and might have done worse They have done again what they have been so much in the habit of doing since Mr. Butler began to score them, nominated their respectable little ticket, adopted their pretty little resolutions, drawn a long breath, and gone home thanking God that they have been delivered from Dr. Loring.

The Sun says: The Republicans of Massachusetts will be beaten,—that is settled. Adams was their only chance, and not a first rate chance either.

The Herald considers all the proceedings as a plain distrust of President Grant, and considers the platform sound, the vote for Mr. Adams significant, and of Mr. Rice, says he is a gentleman and a scholar, but the laboring masses of Massachusetts think him a Boston aristocrat, and his election may be deemed decisively against the very popular Democratic ticket.

THE OLD KITCHEN CLOCK.

BY REBECCA N. PIERCE.

The quaint old clock in the kitchen
Ticks on, not rain stands,
With broad face kindly beaming,
Telling with busy hands.

It stands in Rejoicy corner,
Closely against the wall
A clock of the olden fashion—
Plain, and clumsy, and tall

Through five decades, so weary,
It has stood in the self same place,
With fingers that never are idle,
Moving with patient grace.

Full fifty years of toiling,
With never a thought of repose,
And not a word of complaint or
And never the shade of a frown!

It stands with a moral calmness
Of the years that are drifting by,
Watching the world from its window
Counting the hours as they fly

Though never a model of beauty—
Not a gem of perfect art,
Have yet of earthly merit,
Like many a humble heart.

Its dress of a primitive fashion,
Its voice is deep and low,
With sounds a fierce emphasis
Sometimes it speaks loud and strong

There are times when silvery chiming
Falls from its soft, sad chime,
In most musical notes which seem to
Lull the ear in the listening ear

The years whose flight modern fashion
Has made so rapid and small,
Bring to this old time dial
Do their work upon them all

Ah! many a tale could it tell
Of the joy, of the sorrow without end
Of the kindly words spoken
Of the deeds of love done

You the glad one ever gazed at
Take the measure of some sweet rhyme
Time and tide stay for no man
Time waits for no man.

"FRONA"

AN ITALIAN ROMANCE

We had come down from the mountains only yesterday, we had been up there with our heads in the sky and returned to us today looking back on those heights, and we had seen the sun go down in solemn splendor on all the snow-tops that up with golden fire, peak behind peak slowly receding the mistress like virgin daughters of a king marched gathering round his bride and then he suppose the sky had grown sharp and chill and cold, and the stars shone out and the young moon as well, and gazed at the snows in the depths of the dark green lake, and we had buttoned up our coats as we paced the terrace, and his mighty hand gave us and finished our chamois coats and Valentina, after which we had both to ourselves to the wind and talked.

We were a pleasant party about to break up and there was also something rather melancholy about that. We talked of it and vowed to England to people generally talk of such things, without the least fear of rotten tingling over just sentimentality and making plans for future meetings.

We must do the Italian Pass next year.

Some of the ladies of Italy seem to be in favor of the proposition. Mr. Wyndham Bingham has been telling me all about it. I turned top at the Rosa Inn and [illegible] morning. It only takes [illegible] hours if a snow is in good condition and you have the most magnificent views in the world. Oh—all there is to the Pass I simply can't be bothered going away and leaving that in love lots.

Well we talking that last year you saw—and Gus smoothly. But that time some snowstorm caught us just as we [illegible] the Bernina Pass. We had come far off though all the same. Don't you remember the snow drifts? and how we [illegible] travelling over age that happened to be passing at the time——? And there was Gus who I am almost ashamed to say was [illegible] I will not name the [illegible] rubbed his head in all the remonstrances. The explosion [illegible] was some [illegible] Gus's temper. He had just marched up and down one of these villages and was taking her back to Italy with him. I remember her face—such a pretty bright face she put it up to one of the windows and laughed at the snow-balls.

And Miss Brooke went on talking [illegible] masque was which she [illegible] we were tired or dull, or [illegible] right to part and presently [illegible] Shakspere with each other [illegible] before the next day's sun was high we were most of us scattered far and wide over the face of the mountains like the handful of seeds the Sower flings in the wide field of the pigeons the Pilgrim San Marco.

Dear Brooke and I were not going to part just yet. We were all friends and had agreed to pass our pleasure together for further [illegible] Mr. Wyndham with [illegible] Miss Brooke had drawn a very pretty picture of the chalet of Short Jacket and Tight Hat. Mr. Wyndham was with his sister who is considerably younger than [illegible] about the same age as I was and self commenced at the second time. Our friendship had thus been based on the broad basis of [illegible] Arthur's age she [illegible] Mr. Wyndham was a vulgar Easter [illegible] property to dirty hands, [illegible] and a beard preferred [illegible] Now for Gus [illegible] Gus's tastes—well I don't know. I imagine a washerwoman's daughter would make a strong example of a [illegible] Gus's enthusiasm for the [illegible] Switzerland and [illegible] Italy in particular.

[illegible] Endless [illegible] and pine [illegible] Only there is rather too much of the latter. The Alps [illegible] and [illegible] will never be well [illegible] Gus is talking something [illegible] something romantic [illegible] and to [illegible] I like my [illegible]

[illegible] Gus's [illegible] I [illegible] and for [illegible] Not half better [illegible] summer holidays [illegible]

[illegible] the night [illegible] Monte we could hardly breathe the following morning at Chamonix. A hot, sultry vapory mist hung between us and the Alps through which the sun intensified and [illegible] grey [illegible] All weather we had come [illegible] down their sides now in sharp [illegible] and curves now in long [illegible] Unpitied and downhill road. We had turned our backs upon the great snows [illegible] the strange white ridges on which the Almighty writes so many mysterious lessons and had gone clattering through silent forests and over dashing streams of past tumbling little brown and white toy villages perched like wild birds' nests in the jaws of the rocks till by-and-by a lurking vision had unfolded itself before our eyes and there began to crystallize the slopes vineyards garlanded the valleys the hills the valleys flushed and paled then flushed again with strange and melting opals [illegible] the very rocks seemed to burst forth into leaf and flowers and so step by step we rolled down into sunshine warmth beauty colour fragrance harmony—Italy in one word.

At Como a final separation of our forces took place. The bear-master's holidays were nearly over. He must be setting his face homewards. He was as melancholy and low-spirited about it as any one of his boys could possibly be.

"Do you ever think sometimes Myles said he to me curiously? "You have no horde of young half-barbs to beckon you back with inky fingers? You can wander at will through this sweet classic land of Homer and Cicero?"

Well I think I had better see as much as I can of the country this year, since I am doomed to spend all my future summers at Margate," said I with a laugh.

Only you will never find that washerwoman's daughter in Italy. The race does not exist," cries Miss Brooke with a sorry glance at her own limp, crumpled draperies.

"Not really?" I ask incredulously. And then the steamer on which I stood, began to plunge and snort like a great sea monster, as it was, and the head-master shouted something about Bareno and Stresa, and dinner, and I went across the rippling, dimpling, dancing lake to Menaggio. I slept there that night, and the next day walked through the chestnut wood to Porlezza, where I again took ship, and crossed over to Lugano, from whence wandered through more vineyards and cornfields and chestnut woods, till I found my self the following day at Luino.

There is a nice little inn at Luino, kept by two brothers who were formerly waiters at one of the large Milan hotels. They are pleasant little men, exactly alike, except that one has large, melancholy, brown eyes, and the other small, twinkling, black ones. They wait, cook, clean, and do everything in the hotel themselves. One of them cooked my lunch, and very well cooked it was; the other served me with it. They both came in at the finish, to receive my compliments.

"Have you had a good season?" I asked.

They shook their heads. It was their first year, indeed, and they had not expected much, but the result, unfortunately, had fallen far short of their very moderate expectations. Last night, however, they had had a stroke of luck. An invalid gentleman had occupied their whole of the first floor—

"But he leaves to-day," said the melancholy brother, with a sigh.

"Well, he is travelling for the benefit of his health, we could not expect him to stay here forever," replied the other.

"What is the matter with him?" I asked, more for the sake of prolonging my conversation with the two little men, than for any vivid interest I felt in the invalid gentleman.

"His malady is old age" said the black eyed brother.

"And that is a malady that can never be cured," supplemented the melancholy one. And then in a still more melancholy voice, he added that the empire had just left Marengo and it was time to go down to the landing-place.

We started off down the hot, white, dust-bedeadened road. The two little men accompanied me. They were in hopes of fresh arrivals. The invalid gentleman drove down in his carriage. It passed us just as we reached the fruit-booth in the square.

"The invalid gentleman." Surely that was no invalid's face nor a gentleman's face either that peered out of the window as the carriage passed us. No, it was a little, round, rosy face, with eyes as blue as the sky and such a sweet, innocent half-opened wondering mouth. I saw it all in an instant as it passed.

"I thought you spoke of a gentleman" said I to my two little men. But at that moment the steamer scraped against the side of the little wooden pier, an I a splashing and dashing of waves ensued, a plank was flung across between the boat and the shore, and the passengers came off and the passengers went on all the midst of which I found I common on my two little men disappeared in their characters of waiters for their own hotel.

I think we may go now," said aperitif clean rippling voice in soft slow Italian, and a little child in figure jumped out of the carriage.

An old man followed a very old man—for he was tottering. His coat hung in folds round his poor shrunken form, his head in sheet his face as grey as the ashes of a fire that is burnt out. He looked absolutely stepping head foremost into the grave.

The girl helped him carefully out of the carriage, and then slipping her arm in his led him down to the little plank. I followed in three steps could not help watching the pair. There was something so touching so gender in the way in which he clung to her and she supported him.

At the plank all was bustle and confusion still I saw a young man and young, and boy—were being carried across. The old man placed his trembling foot on this end of the plank just when a burly German at the other gave it an unconscious shove. The board slipped suddenly, the girl's hand was jerked out of the old man's, and in another second he would have been precipitated into the water, but for an intervening arm which was fortunately able to steady him and drag him back to shore

That intervening arm was mine, and I shall never forget the look of gratitude on the old man's face, nor the pretty words that came rippling from the young girl's fresh lips, a little bubbling stream in spring time

We all went safely on board together a moment later that little incident having made us friends on the spot

The girl became very busy immediately, doing nothing about him and fetching cushions and stools, and looking to the comfortable seat for the old man, who was her father, probably, though he might with equal probability, have been her grandfather as far as age went. She found out at last in a cosy corner, shaded from the sun and shielded from the wind. She sat down beside him herself, and peered out under the awning with her great misty blue eyes

There was no room for me and I loitered to sell the little girl locked rather, seen in conversation. It could not be helped however. The boat was full I strolled away to the other end

What a lovely scene burst or rather stole upon my view as I got away clear of the awning! It is one of the peculiar fascinations of Italian beauty it does not startle you overcome you all at once by its magnificence and awe, as northern scenery does, but rather it steals upon you slowly spending itself on you before you drop by drop till it gently overflows your soul. One's eyes indeed take some time to [illegible] the mind till the strange soft, misty colouring of the place

It is like looking at the world through a rainbow. To-day for instance at first I could discern nothing but a green mist then a purple one then a grey one a blue one a pink one, as one by one like old mountain revealed themselves on the opposite shore range after range. Distressed up in shadows, with little villages at the foot of the hills glittering in the western sun like jewels on a maiden's breast. Overhead the sky grew very clear and bright, and the big white clouds parted themselves in some where and then the pink, lilac, like street I counted sailed across same drifting across the sun—pathway. Here and there a little boat went skimming across the lake, stirring it glassy surface and leaving behind it a track like a comet's tail. In the distance I descried the Villa Jovis, built with the taste of a king and the pride of a sailor and pearly gates [illegible]

SEA CAPTAIN CURED —OF— RHEUMATISM.

HE GRINS WITH JOY.

LEXINGTON, Mass., June 23, 1875

PROF. ALPHONSE HILLER:

DEAR SIR.—For the alleviation of human suffering I feel it my duty as well as pleasure to certify to the following facts in my own case

The past spring I was sore afflicted with Sciatic Rheumatism, suffering night after night and all night without the least cessation, the most excruciating pains I ever knew. My doctor who prescribed it my family for over thirty years to my entire satisfaction, also in whom I still have the utmost confidence, said that "medicine would do me no good—he could not help me, time probably would, and in six or eight weeks it might leave me in the meantime I must grin and bear it." But I was not disposed to do so, and in my desperation caught at the first article, which under the name of Quack or Patent Medicine, so many old experienced, promised relief. I suppose that this was the obtained at No. 38 Hanover st., Boston, the state menus accompanying directions seemed reasonable, and I determined to give it a fair trial. I did so, at the same time being without faith in its efficacy. I followed the directions, and the results were that on using the third bottle I was sensible that it was acting powerfully and favorably, and before using the fourth bottle, my pains had ceased entirely, and I now have occasion to write (with joy) that I no longer have to bear them.

Yours respectfully,

WM. D. PHELPS.

We endorse the above testimony as genuine.

Q. C. GOODWIN & CO.,
38 Hanover-street

Mr Phelps is a gentleman well and favorably known in this community, and for the past forty years has been recognized by our shipping merchants as one of the most successful capitalists in the port of Boston. This testimony, is genuine and speaks more than volumes could express, in favor of the great merits of the

Diamond Rheumatic Cure.

This medicine is prepared by a careful, experienced and conscientious physician, in obedience to the desire of numberless friends in the profession, in the trade and among the people. Every bottle is warranted to contain full strength of the medicine in the highest state of purity and the telegraph, and is superior to any medicine at compounded for this terrible complaint.

In simple cases sometimes one or two ounces suffice. In the most chronic cases it is sure to give ease by the use of four or five bottles. By the efficacious and simple remedy, hundreds of dollars are saved to those who can least afford to throw it away, as surely it is by the purchase of useless prescriptions

The medicine for sale at all druggists throughout the United States and Canada. If it happens that your druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send for it to any of the wholesale druggists in Boston, Cincinnati, N. H., Worcester, Providence, Portland, Bangor and other places.

LETTER CARRIERS

All letters are delivered free by carriers when addressed to street and number. People should inform their correspondents of above and have their letters addressed accordingly.

Persons leaving their address at the General Delivery can also have their letters sent. This is so much more convenient to have the street and number on, and they will be delivered earlier than if the same is put on at the office. Carriers make two delivery daily, the first trip supplying the extremes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening a session for important business—the town boxes fifteen and the up town boxes thirty minutes before closing mails at the office.

Holidays the Carrier's Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8½ to 9½ A. M., and from 7½ to 8½ P. M. Sundays from 8½ to 9½ A. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office
